

B. Staff Survey Questions

Here are some sample questions you could use in a survey of your staff to gauge their interests, attitudes and preferences when it comes to volunteering.

Include an introductory statement about why you want to start up a volunteering program, why you are conducting the survey and collecting this information, and what you will do with the information.

Sample Questions

1. What type of volunteering might appeal to you? (Please circle all those which apply)

Team based projects

Individual projects

Related to your work skills

Not related to your work skills

Takes place outdoors

Takes place indoors

Computer based projects

2. How likely are you to participate in such a program? (Please circle)

Very likely

Likely

Not very likely

Very unlikely

Don't know

3. Do you have any particular community causes or organisations which appeal to you and you would like our business to support?

4. What would you see the benefits of an employee volunteering program as being – for yourself, the business, the not-for-profit organisation?

5. If you are considering taking part in an employee volunteering program, what would be your main motivation for participating in the program?

6. Is it likely that the introduction of an employee volunteering program will influence your opinion of the business?
