Why are we here

Communiter is a social enterprise with a mission to connect, engage and mobilise volunteers towards the world's greatest challenges.

We strongly believe in the power of volunteering to go across cultures, sectors and industries to build a shared understanding and unifying compassion.

Together, we can build supportive and inclusive infrastructure to take volunteering into the future.

Who are we

We provide a network for community organisations to engage in proactive problem-solving with corporate, education and government sectors.

We are

A support network to guide volunteering exchanges.

An ally to advocate for cross-sector investment.

A facilitator of connection and collaboration.

What we do

Our aim is to make volunteering accessible, flexible, measurable and meaningful.

Volunteers can easily find causes they believe in to lend their skills and capacity.

VIOs enter a consultative volunteer exchange, opening doors to strategic opportunities.

Collaborating Together

With businesses, educators and government resourcing the community sector to its full potential, we can reimagine the future of volunteering in Australia.

Corporate power to invest in our future

Enabled by employers, volunteering can be more economically accessible. Allowing employees to express the causes they care about, will lead industries towards sustainable economic growth.

Education to drive social progress

Fostering curiosity for education on social, cultural, environmental and economic issues builds the knowledge to spark innovation and accountability in our leadership.

Community organisations to capture goodwill

Greater support, protection and investment for VIOs allows them to bridge those in need with those who can help. While playing a critical role to nurture flourishing and resilient communities.

Government to provide enabling infrastructure

We can build the critical foundations for long-term impact with the right structures, incentives and strategies for cross-sector collaboration.

The Power of Volunteering

Volunteering creates the opportunity to learn about the world around us and tackle the formative challenges of our time.

When we understand the experience of others, we change how we interact in our day-to-day lives, where we direct our consumer power, and how we influence our relationships, education and employment.
